

East Stroudsburg Jointure Building Approved

STATE officials gave the "go-ahead" signal yesterday to a proposed $2,750,000 junior-senior high school for East Stroudsburg Area Jointure.

In a letter over the signature of Dr. Ralph Swan, the State Department of Public Instruction told the Jointure that it could proceed in preparing final plans and specifications for the building.

Carl T. Secor, supervising principal said last night that "it will probably be sometime in August before we get started on the building."

Secor said he had been informed by H. P. Everett and Sons, Allentown, architects for the building, that plans and specifications are "about 90 percent complete."

Everett told Secor that it will take "another three, possibly four weeks to complete those plans."

When they are finished they still must be reviewed and approved by the Joint School Board. Then they go to Harrisburg where they will be studied by the Department of Public Instruction.

Once final State approval is given, the joint board will advertise for bids for construction of the large high school building.

The building will house 36 classrooms, a gymnasium, auditorium, cafeteria, library and other facilities.

In giving its approval to the preparation of plans and "specs," the State Department said that the local district should proceed on the theory that its assessments will be sufficient to float a needed bond issue.

This is a reference to the assessment picture in the six districts which make up the jointure: East Stroudsburg Borough, Price, Porter, Lehman, Smithfield and Middle Smithfield townships.

Last month a delegation from the Joint Board appeared before Monroe County Commissioners with a request that the Commission send a letter to the State assuring officials that the assessment program locally will be in effect soon enough to aid in raising the necessary funds for construction.

The delegation was interested primarily in securing a Commission promise that assessed values will be set at a high enough percentage to allow for floating of necessary bond issues.

Bond issues are controlled by assessed values.

Commissioners responded with an assurance that they would consider setting assessments at anywhere up to 50 percent of the overall appraised value established by J. L. Jacobs Co., the firm in charge of the project for the County.

A letter to this effect was sent by the County to the DPL.

It was this letter which brought about DPI conditional approval yesterday.

Russia Fires World Fair Propaganda

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Soviet Union has fired the first shot in the big World Fair propaganda battle by unveiling a life-sized Sputnik.

They gave Belgian Prime Minister Achille Van Acker and Cabinet ministers a preview today of their sprawling exhibit, which threatens to swamp the American show by its size and the amount of rubles lavished on it.

The fair—first to be held in 19 years — is scheduled to open Thursday and continue through Oct. 19.

The Soviet and American pavilions stand almost side by side—a narrow road, but miles of ideology, separating them.

With their huge and costly exhibit, the Soviets are seeking to extol the virtues of Communism, while the United States hopes to show the world the advantages of democracy and free enterprise. The propaganda battle will be seen by an estimated 35 million visitors.

Area Pilot Flying Press For Ike

By Don Carlson

AN EAST Stroudsburg commercial airline pilot has currently been helping White House press correspondents keep up with Ike.

Eastern Airline Pilot Lloyd E. Sebring, of 20 Marguerite St., has on four occasions flown the Washington-Augusta flight known to newsmen and pilots as the "White House Charter."

Describing the less than two-hour trip as "more or less routine," Sebring noted that often times the passenger lists totals near capacity of the huge constellations seating for 60 persons.

Presidential security personnel, he said, frequently use the White House Charter — along with newsmen — on the flights to the Georgia vacationland for Ike's golfing.

Sebring, who just returned from one of these flights Sunday, remarked that it had been delayed a short span for White House Press Secretary James Haggerty.

Haggerty, he explained, was detained in Augusta for an appearance on the television program of "Wide, Wide World."

In most instances when the President is flying from Washington to Augusta, Sebring continued, the White House Charter leaves with its newsmen-photographers cargo in advance of the Columbine.

On return trips, departure of the two planes is usually reversed.

Lloyd E. Sebring

The trips are well co-ordinated, Sebring noted, and Ike's reception by close personnel frequently leads the President off hastily to nearby golf links where he attempts to get in two or three 18-hole rounds.

The constellations used for the White House Charter run claims four 3,250 horsepower engines — each of which uses specially designed turbines that are fed with exhaust gases.

Sebring began flying some 14 years ago and prior to joining Eastern, spent six years in the Air Force. A portion of those years were spent flying in Korea.

One experience encountered while flying there involved a helicopter. The incident was one that "takes 10 years off" a pilot's life, he chuckled, and this incident was created by a sudden engine failure.

In a "chopper," he explained, there is a critical attitude where a situation such as this can make safe landing extremely difficult. Through quick action, however, the craft was brought down safely.

Sebring joined the commercial airline about a year ago. The four runs for newsmen were described as "routine flying with the same procedures and safety precautions used on any flight."

"I do get a small thrill out of it," he concluded, "especially the chance to see the President."

Sebring is a native of the Cherry Lane section of Monroe County and is a graduate of Pocono High School, class of 1943, Tannersville.

Gaillard Risks Life Of Government

PARIS (AP) — Premier Felix Gaillard risks the life of his government today on the question of accepting the recommendations of the British-American good offices team for resuming direct negotiations with Tunisia.

The general feeling in the corridors of the National Assembly on the eve of a special session was that Gaillard could win a vote at the end of the debate, but that his address to the deputies might be the determining factor.

The deputies were called back from their Easter vacation to hear a statement from the government. Not until the Assembly meets will ground rules for the debate be fixed.

Stroudsburg Letter Fails To Satisfy State

By Leonard Randolph

THE FATE of a $3 million Brodheads-McMichaels Creek flood control project hangs in the balance today.

Dr. Maurice K. Goddard, secretary of forests and waters, said yesterday afternoon that he is not satisfied with a letter from Stroudsburg Borough Council which theoretically agreed to sponsor Stroudsburg's share of the local costs.

Dr. Goddard said "there are a few points we have to get clarified where the Stroudsburg letter is concerned." He said a letter explaining his department's views was being forwarded to Stroudsburg yesterday.

The Forests and Waters chief went on to say that "in June of last year, we sent a letter to Stroudsburg telling them what the project was to be. At that time we asked them for a letter agreeing to sponsorship of the project."

Simple Answer

"When you ask a community to sponsor a project such as this you are asking for a simple yes or no answer. I want a clear-cut answer to the question," he said.

"Instead we got a letter that is two or three pages long and is filled with exceptions," Dr. Goddard said.

Reminded that today is the April 15 deadline set for response from Stroudsburg on its agreement to go along with the project, Dr. Goddard said that the Department will wait a reasonable time for an answer to its latest letter.

"We'll give them a chance to answer," he said. "I think this whole thing can be resolved."

The Stroudsburg letter was mailed, according to Borough Manager Harold Snyder, on Wednesday, April 9. Dr. Goddard said yesterday that it did not arrive in his office until Friday, April 11.

According to Snyder the letter sent out from Stroudsburg agreed to go along with the project but listed a series of offsets or credits which the borough said it felt should lower the total of its share of costs.

No definite amount was listed in the letter, Snyder told The Daily Record, at the time it was mailed.

When contacted at his office in Harrisburg, Dr. Goddard said that he would prefer not to discuss matters pertaining to the letter to Stroudsburg officials until it had been sent to them.

In the breakdown of costs for the local flood control project, the State would pay $2,800,000. The local communities — Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and the County, would go along for the remainder of the costs.

No exact estimate of total or local costs can be made, however, until the final plans are drawn up.

Khrushchev Gives Hug To Pianist

MOSCOW (AP) — Van Cliburn, the Texas capitalist's son who won the Soviet Unions Tchaikovsky piano contest, got a bear hug from Nikita Khrushchev.

The lanky 23-year-old American met at a Kremlin reception for the contestants of the international violin and piano competitions held here.

Bushy-haired, 6-foot-4 Cliburn, who was awarded 25,000 rubles—officially $6,250—and a gold medal as the winner of the contest, asked Khrushchev what he could play for him. The Soviet leader held back his request and said they were planning a party for him tonight.

Then Khrushchev greeted other finalists, including two other Americans, and went off to congratulate U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson on Cliburn's victory.

Cliburn, who played through the competitions with a bandaged index finger and lost 10 pounds doing it, brought a Moscow audience to its feet cheering wildly Friday night when he played his final round.

He won Moscow's heart, and Americans in the capital found themselves suddenly getting handshakes from Russian enthusiasts. There clearly were no sour grapes among the Russians, whose entry, Lev Vlasenko, tied for second place with Communist China's Liu Shi-kin.

The other American winners were Daniel Pollack of Los Angeles, who finished ninth in the piano competition; and Joyce Flosser of New York, who finished seventh in the violin contest.

Cliburn, who studied at New York's Juilliard School of Music, comes from Kilgore, Tex., where his father is an oil executive.

Churchill Sees Signs Of Decay

NEW YORK (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill sees signs of decay in the Soviet Union's iron control over its "outpost line of satellite states deep in Central Europe."

"No one can believe that this will last forever," he writes in an article, "The Cold 'Peace' and Our Future," in Look magazine.

"Hungary has paid a terrible price. But to all thinking men, certain hopeful features of the present situation must surely be clear."

Among these features, Churchill saw the doctrine of communism being separated from the Russian military machine, further revolts against the Soviet empire and the fact an arms race of nuclear weapons and missiles is as disturbing to Moscow as it is to other powers.

"I make no plea for disarmament," he said. "Disarmament is a consequence and a manifestation of free intercourse between free peoples. It is the mind which controls the weapon, and it is to the minds of the peoples of Russia and her associates that the free nations should address themselves."

Disarmament Problems

The 83-year-old ex-Prime Minister summed up the problems of nuclear disarmament this way: "In former days, no country could hope to build up in secret military forces vast enough to overwhelm a neighbor. Now the means of destruction of many millions can be concealed in the space of a few cubic yards."

Churchill's article is a broad panorama of world events in the 13 years since the Potsdam conference, the point at which he ended his six-volume history of World War II.

Churchill had strong praise for former President Truman and his conduct of the Korean War.

"His celerity, wisdom and courage in this crisis made him worthy in my estimation, to be numbered among the greatest of American presidents," Churchill wrote.

Churchill ended his article on this hopeful note: "As long, therefore, as the free world holds together, and especially Britain and the United States, and maintains its strength, Russia will find that peace and plenty have more to offer than exterminatory war."

"The broadening of thought is a process which acquires momentum by seeking opportunity for all who claim it. And it may well be, if wisdom and patience are practice, that opportunity for all will conquer the minds and restrain the passions of mankind."

Major Leagues Open Pennant Race Today

By The Associated Press

FOR AT LEAST 24 hours the Washington Senators, last year's cellar-dwellers, can look down at the rest of the American League from their first-place perch after beating Boston 5-2 in a special opening game yesterday before 26,674 Griffith Stadium spectators, including President Eisenhower.

Everything went Washington's way. The President, inaugurating his sixth straight American League campaign, came up with two traditional right-handed tosses. The first was caught by Whitey Herzog, Washington outfielder. The second was grabbed by Jimmy Ryan, Washington battery.

Everybody gets into the act today with a full eight-game schedule, including a night opener at St. Louis and the first championship major league game in California.

National League

In the National League, Los Angeles is at San Francisco, Philadelphia at Cincinnati, Pittsburgh at Milwaukee, and Chicago at St. Louis.

In the American League, New York is at Boston, Washington at Baltimore, Kansas City at Cleveland, and Detroit at Chicago.

The world champions Braves will be forced to open their home season without two of their regular outfielders. Left fielder Wes Covington jammed a knee in spring training and center fielder Billy Bruton has not yet recovered from surgery on a knee last winter.

Cleveland will open without the services of its leading slugger, Vic Wertz. The first baseman fractured an ankle during spring training.

The Yankees have two casualties. Shortstop Tony Kubek has a pulled tendon in back of his knee and left fielder Harry Simpson has a fractured wrist.

James T. Mies

Duke Snider's status is uncertain for Los Angeles' opener. He is still bothered by a bad knee, operated on during the winter. Second baseman Charlie Neal is bothered by a strained rib but he may play.

Philadelphia will be without the services of third baseman Willie Jones, who left the club to attend the funeral of his 3-year-old son, who died of pneumonia.

Left fielder Al Smith of the Chicago White Sox, hobbled by a foot injury all spring, is not expected to play. Shortstop Willie Miranda of Baltimore, a sprained ankle victim, also is laid up with bronchitis.

Four rookies will make their major league debut in the Dodgers-Giants opener in San Francisco. The Giants will trot out three fledglings — first baseman Orlando Cepeda, third baseman Jim Davenport and right fielder Willie Kirkland — and the Dodgers will present Dick Gray at third base. A Seals' Stadium capacity crowd of 23,400 will see Los Angeles' Don Drysdale (17-9) and the Giants' Ruben Gomez (15-13) match right arms on the mound.

Cancer Drive Set Tonight

TONIGHT at 6:30 local residents are asked to donate to the 1958 Cancer Crusade.

The "porchlight" drive will collect funds which are used all year round in Monroe County to help prevent death from cancer.

Daniel G. Warner, Crusade chairman, said last night that "every contribution from every family is of great value in the battle against cancer."

Warner said that one of the most important functions filled by the local unit, American Cancer Societ, each year is in the field of education.

"Through educating the public to cancer's danger signals we help to detect cancer earlier. And early cancers can be cured," Warner said.

The local unit participates in many community affairs — showing films, distributing educational literature, displaying posters and setting up exhibits for organizations.

During the year from Sept. 1, 1956 to Aug. 31, 1957, the local unit showed films on cancer 13 times, distributed 6,932 pieces of education literature on cancer, displayed 116 posters, prepared 13 exhibits and conducted one full-scale meeting for physicians.

The education committee, headed by Mrs. Arthur Ifft, is "happy to provide programs for any group meeting such as PTAs, Sunday School classes, service organizations or auxiliaries," Warner said.

All of the unit's activities are financed by voluntary contributions from residents of the area, Warner said.

Big Three Wins Official Backing

PARIS (AP) — The Western Big Three won official backing yesterday of their North Atlantic Pact Allies for a plan to open talks in Moscow this week on a possible summit conference.

The NATO permanent council approved plans of the United States, Britain and France to accept, under certain conditions, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's suggestion that Western ambassadors begin preliminary talks with Kremlin officials Thursday.

The West, it was learned, will urge the Kremlin to let the ambassadors decide their own agenda and procedure. This would cover the chief points at issue: Whether a foreign ministers' conference, and subsequently a meeting of heads of government, should be held even if the ambassadorial meetings show no promise of eventual agreement.

The project, a 5.14-mile Thruway at Stroudsburg, will serve as the eastern terminus of the federal interstate east-west highway.

The shortway, estimated to cost 290 million dollars, is planned to be completed in 10 to 12 years.

The Stroudsburg Thruway will run from the Delaware Water Gap to a point near Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg. It will be a four-lane highway and include eight bridges plus ramps, service road and marginal roads.

Commissioners Discuss Office Space Problems

Two Plans Listed For Added Space

TWO plans which would give Monroe County's government more office space were presented to Commissioners yesterday morning.

One would cost about $70,000; the other an estimated $100,000. Both plans were outlined by Rinker and Klefer, Stroudsburg firm of architects. They had been asked to study existing office space and facilities by Commissioners more than a month ago.

County officials have been pressing their desire for additional office room during recent months.

Assessor's Office

With the upcoming tax equalization program nearing completion, new room for Chief Assessor George Brands and his work force has become a necessity.

Labelled "Plan A" and "Plan B", the two outlines call for the following relocation of offices or construction:

Plan A — Construction of a new addition to the existing building used for County School offices; the Red Cross and vocational-education offices.

This would create an estimated 62,000 cubic feet of space. Under this plan the entire first floor would be used for the assessment office system.

The Red Cross office would remain where it now is located on the second floor of the present building. Offices of County Superintendent John C. Litts, his staff and the vocational and special education advisers would go into the second floor of the new addition.

Stop-Gap

While this plan would serve as a stop-gap solution to the problems of overcrowding, it would be less feasible as a long-range solution, Murrell Klefer told the board.

As a long-view scheme, Rinker and Klefer recommended Plan B in which:

An 80-foot addition would be built into the present County school building. The first floor of this addition would be large enough to accommodate the assessment offices.

On the second floor of the addition would go the Children's Aid Society of Monroe County and the local unit of the American Cancer Society.

The State Clinic and the Tuberculosis and Health Society.

All four of these agencies are now located in county-owned buildings on Sarah St. Rinker and Klefer recommend that these two buildings be torn down to provide parking space.

With construction of the proposed addition at the school office building, the county's parking area would be nearly eliminated.

Placement of the addition on the school office building would (Please turn to page 12)

Production Declines Two Points

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday its index of industrial production declined two points in March to 128—the lowest level since the 1954 recession.

The board said the index was 12 percent below the level for a year ago when the figure was 145. The March decline was the seventh successive monthly drop in the index.

The index, in which 100 is the 1947-49 average, is a key economic indicator. It is a measure of the volume of production of the nation's factories and mines.

It hit its peak of 147 in December, 1956. Its low point during the 1954 recession was 123 in August of that year.

Summary

In a summary of business conditions, the board noted that not only industrial production but employment, incomes, and retail sales declined in March while unemployment was on the rise. However, it said the downward trend was not as sharp as in February.

Construction activity was maintained at a high level, it said. Total new construction outlays in March, seasonally adjusted, were at an annual rate of $48,100,000,000 which compares with the peak of $48,800,000,000 last October.

Private housing starts in March were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of less than 900,000 units, about the same as in February, the board said.

It reported the March decline in durable goods industries was at a slower rate than in other recent months. Output of nondurable items continued to edge downward and there was a substantial drop in minerals production.

Hasty decisions are made that later lead to a lifetime of regret. When selecting your memorial see the

Spring Release Of Game Birds Completed In State

SPRING releases of game birds — with the exception of quail has been completed throughout the state, Game Commission officials report.

In Monroe County, District Game Protector John H. Doebling last night said the releases were made in March and completed early this month.

"We've had a liberal stocking this Spring," he remarked, and added that "a few more turkeys" were released than last year. Release of ring-necked pheasants, reared at State Game Farms, have been distributed across the Commission officials said, there were an estimated 700 wild turkeys — in the ratio of one tom to every three hens — liberated in the Southeast and Southeastern Divisions of the State.

Last month, about 1,800 of the birds, 400 toms and 1,400 hens, were stocked in the Northwest, Southwest, Northeast and Northeast Divisions.

Officials also report that a total of 19,600 mature ring-neck pheasants, reared at State Game Farms, have been distributed across the Commonwealth. The sex breakdown was 9,100 males and 10,500 females.

Before the end of this month, they continued, 1,000 Bogwhite quail, half males and half females, will have been stocked in the Southeast Division. Another 500 pairs are expected to be released in the south-western counties.

Mallard ducks being held at the State Wild Waterfowl Farm in Crawford County for egg production are laying, and the first eggs were placed in an incubator a week ago yesterday.

Eastern Poconos Resorts Plan For Vacation Season

EASTERN POCONOS Resort Assn. launched preparations for the 1968 vacation season last night at its first Spring meeting of the year at Altier's Inn, along Route 209.

A majority of resort operators at the largely attended session reported the outlook for the coming season was exceptionally bright. Reservations exceed past years, particularly for the early part of the season, the operators said.

William J. Altier, president, said the association went on record by a unanimous vote to support the Monroe County Chapter of the Keystone Shortway Assn. in its efforts to obtain early construction of the Stroudsburg-Sharon superhighway.

Annual Banquet

May 22 was set as the date for the 11th annual banquet. It will be held at Bushkill Falls House. Entertainment will be added to the usual banquet program and reservations will be limited to 300 persons.

Altier urged all resort owners to participate in the annual Hotel Show at the Penn-Stroud Hotel since the support of the industry is needed to perpetuate the Vacation Bureau-sponsored show.

Repairs are being made to damaged road signs put up by the association to guide tourists on the many scenic drives in the Eastern Poconos. One map of the area will be printed by Roger Miller and placed in the association's information booth at Marshall's Creek to assist in directing vacationists in the Eastern Poconos.

Road-E-O Official Talks To Students

STANLEY GRACE, chairman of the Pocono Mountains Jaycees committee for the teenage safe driving road-E-O, yesterday addressed students of the Stroud Union High School and noted: "Anyone can drive fast, but skill is a challenge."

The address, an invitation to all drivers and student drivers between the ages of 18 and 20 to enter the forthcoming competitive event, will be repeated Friday at the East Stroudsburg High School.

Grace pointed out that teenagers throughout the county, who hold either a drivers license or permit, can enter the Road-E-O. Participants, he added, can not have had a moving traffic violation within six months of the Road-E-O date.

Improvement The purpose of the April 26 contest, he said, is to prove and improve driving habits.

Awards for the first place winner include a traveling trophy which will be presented to the school that person attends. Individual trophies will also be presented to the first three place victors.

Certificates will be given to all participants, he said, and added that the local champion will compete with other winners from the various statewide communities in a state level contest also to be held here.

Trout Season Begins Today

AFTER RE-APPRAISING weather predictions and area stream levels, State Fish Warden Floyd Bachman of Stroudsburg yesterday expressed a prediction, "we may have a good day after all."

Streams, he said, have shown a marked drop and some letup in swiftness. Weather, too, he remarked, "is going to be pretty nice."

On the state scene, trout anglers are expected to bypass today's opening because of muddy waters and high streams.

The Associated Press reported that William Voigt, executive director of the Fish Commission, commented: "As far as I'm concerned, I have no prediction at all to make."

Streams High "I can only agree that some streams are high and muddy and that there was a smaller stocking in Pennsylvania this year than last," Voigt said. "But I have no prediction on what the anglers will do."

The executive director said "too much depends on the skill of the angler" to forecast the first day catch.

Heavy rains and remaining fast-melting snows in many areas caused rivers and streams to swell and become muddy. Fishing begins at 5 a. m.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

With their minds, club members may relish programs on current events and the economic status of women, but their hearts are in their home, and if you want to hear a gabble after a meeting just schedule a speaker on some form of home decorating.

The Woman's Club yesterday was a case in point. I learned lots of interesting things about wall-pare including the fact that some people, when they moved, took their wall paper with them. And that early American paperhangers, dealing with the scenic paper imported from France, would sometimes end up with half a person on one side of the window and the other half on the other side of the window with light showing through the middle.

Well, light was showing through the middle of the Community House yesterday as the members of the Woman's Club who are on the committee for the Federation luncheon today got busy setting up the tables in the Stroud rooms of the museum.

It is pleasant to have all the doors standing open, as they must indeed have stood in the early Springs when the Mansion House was the social center of the town of the Strouds themselves were in residence.

Now they will have to watch today's festivities through painted eyes looking down from the portraits on the wall but their spirits should feel right at home with all the stir and bustle of hospitality.

Vocational Discontent Or Just Spring Fever?

By Anne Heywood

This is the time of year for spring fever, romance and playing hokey and, as I can tell by my mail, for contemplating a change of job.

I don't know why, but we all get restless and dissatisfied with the status quo during April. Many times it looks like a good idea to scrap the old job and get something new and interesting. Obviously, sometimes it is the right thing to do. But more often it is just a symptom of spring fever and should be treated as such.

How Can You Tell?

How can you tell if your vocational discontent really does mean that it's time to change jobs?

Here is a quick check list: 1. If it's a new idea that came with April, and that hasn't been in your mind for very long, chances are it will go as quietly as it came.

2. If you've been behind in your work, handling it lackadaisically or downright shiftlessly, chances are you shouldn't change.

Unfinished Work

We all have periods when our virtue is not sufficient to keep us in top working form; times when we slide and let things pile up in the back of the desk. This piled-up, unfinished work gives us a kind of subconscious guilty feeling and we become convinced that what we need is a change of scene. But this is the wrong reason for changing jobs.

The only solution is simply to knuckle down and clean things up. If, after that, you still feel like changing, it might be that the desire is valid.

3. If you have just had the break-up of a big romance, chances are that your desire for a career change is invalid.

Won't Solve Anything

It's humiliating and heart-breaking to have to stay in the James Harmon Jr., president, requests the presence of all class representatives.

Spring is the Time for Romance

After all, at this time of year it's been a long time since your last vacation. It pays to wait until you've had one and rested up before you decide that you hate your job.

Have A Check-Up

Get to your doctor, have a physical check-up and see if that drained, exhausted feeling isn't physical instead of vocational.

However, if none of these things is the case, and a change in jobs is really indicated, do make haste slowly. To paraphrase the old expression, "Change career in haste, repent at leisure."

For further pointers, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope, care of this newspaper, and I will send you my list of good books on job-hunting.

Historic Wallpapers Shown At Woman's Club Meeting

"I have learned more history from the back of wallpaper than I ever learned in school," Mrs. Dorothy Waterhouse of Boston, Mass., told members of the Women's Club of the Stroudsburg yesterday afternoon.

The history was contained on old newspapers, often used as the first coat over plaster in early homes, she explained. She combined a lot of history herself in her talk on "Documentary Wallpaper."

Starting with the discovery of colonial wallpaper under seven layers of Victorian wallpaper in an old home she and her husband had purchased, Mrs. Waterhouse is now a specialist in old wallpapers, and many of the designs she has discovered are now being used in wallpaper and fabric reproductions.

She has found old wallpaper in many of the colonial homes of New England, some of it still in use at the time of discovery. Much of it however has been covered by layers of later paper, hidden behind false walls of lath and plaster used to make rooms seem smaller, used to line old trunks, or to cover hand-boxes.

The first wall paper was used in Europe in the 1500's, she said, and were hand printed on sheets the size of today's typing paper, with 24 sheets to a pack. Wallpaper in a continuous roll was not available until 1800.

As late as 1854, a householder in Charlestown, Mass. was fined "for frivolity" because he had decorated his walls by hand. However, the fashion for wallpaper grew. The early paper was imported from England and France, she said.

Some wallpaper was backed by muslin so that it could be moved, and many of the ads for houses for sale mentioned as a special inducement "With paper."

She exhibited samples of many designs and colors. Some was of fabric, and all of the best quality rag paper made to last. The colors were particularly fine, she pointed out, and are in demand today. Rainbow wall paper from the 1830's, scenic from the 1820's; grape from the 1840's; Pampadour's era; gold on white, which cannot be produced today were among the samples shown.

Floral, with the flowers hand painted; triangles, decorated stripes, acauthus leaves, carnations, and scenic papers were also shown in her collection.

Mrs. Waterhouse is a friend of Mrs. Irving Harrison, former member of the Stroudsburg Club who now lives on Cape Cod, and Mrs. Harrison was present for the meeting.

A tea preceded the program with the tables covered with pink floating candles and an arrangement of greens and miniatures in Easter eggs arranged by the hostesses, Mrs. Thomas I. Metzgar, Mrs. Donald A. Robbins, Mrs. Harry D. Kresge, chairman; Mrs. Gerald O'Neill, Mrs. David Peiffy, Mrs. Charles Reusswig, Mrs. Harold Rinker, Mrs. Milo Rasely, and Mrs. Howard Rockefeller.

Mrs. Samuel O. Wells, III, president announced that mothers would be honored at the May meeting. It is a member participation program, and members were asked to bring mementos of their mothers or grandmothers cherished for a particular reason.

Brannum To Appear In Film

THE SON of a part-time Shawnee-on-Delaware resident left last night by air for Spain where he will appear in a film version of the life of John Paul Jones.

He is Thomas Brannum, 21-year-old son of Hugh (Lumpy) Brannum. It will be his first film effort.

The picture, depicting the life of one of America's great naval heroes, is being filmed by an independent company and will be released by Warner Brothers.

Brannum's father is well-known in this area. He performed with Fred Waring's ensemble for many years and for the last three years has been associated with the television show, "Captain Kangaroo," as Mr. Greenjeans.

What Young People Think

Teen-Agers Purchase Sack Dresses

By Eugene Gilbert
President of the Gilbert Youth Research Co.

THE CHEMISE, known in the vulgar as the sack dress, is strictly for sad sacks, as far as the nation's teen-agers are concerned.

Fickle fashion's most controversial item since the new look of a decade ago has definitely struck out with the pony tail and blue denim set.

The boys, in particular, regard it as an abomination. Of those we polled in a nationwide survey, 86 percent roared abuse at this throw back to the Roaring '20s. Only 8 percent said they liked it, and the rest hadn't seen it yet.

Girls were almost as vehement in their denunciation of the sack dress but did not always practice what they preached. When asked if they liked it, 65 percent of the bobby-soxers answered with a definite No.

But They Buy

But not all had the courage of their convictions. Almost three out of every 10 sheepishly admitted that, as slaves to fashion, they already had bought one or more chemise dresses, even though 86 percent of the boys and girls — especially the boys — say it never will last.

"I hate it," confessed Marilyn Peters of Toledo. "But what can you do? You have to keep up with the times."

Morris Oppal of Cleveland neatly summed up the feelings of his fellow men with a few inflammatory adjectives: "absolutely hideous, horrendous, terrible and vile."

Boys were outspokenly concerned about the camouflage job that the new sack dresses perform on the feminine figure. "I want my girl to look like a girl, not a potential butterfly wrapped in a cocoon," complained a Chicago teen-ager.

Added Tom Brickley of Medford, Mass. "I'd strangle my girl if she ever bought one of these things. Worse, I'd ask for my ring back."

Girls, however, were quick to see the advantages in this formless, shapeless attire.

"I don't see what all the fuss is about," commented Nancy Jilowsky of Dallas. "I think the chemise is a boon for girls who don't do too much for a tight-fitting sheath dress and who look too heavy in a flared skirt."

Parents Divided

But junior misses who didn't like it were hardly less restrained in their invective than the boys.

"The chemise is the most ghastly thing I've ever seen worn by a woman," said Patricia Kaplan, a freshman at New York's Barnard College, who declined to say whether she had declined chemises in her collegiate wardrobe.

At Atlanta, Ga., Louann Bates was equally perturbed over the sack, but earnestly wondered what one southern belle could do against a phalanx of Parisian designers.

"I wouldn't be caught dead in one of those things," she protested, "but when you go shopping, there's nothing else to buy. I guess I'll end up wearing it like the rest of them."

Youth gives the sack to the sack, not the girl.

A similar defeatist attitude was noted in other sections of the country. "You just can't find anything else on the racks," said Susan Acks of Brooklyn. "What's the use of buying anything else if it's going to be regarded as last year's style."

Parents, who usually have to foot the clothing bill, were drawn into the argument by their polsters and seemed about equally divided between pro and anti-sack factions.

Dad Is Amused

"My mother thinks the chemise is improper because when she was a girl they didn't wear anything underneath them," answered one young respondent who declined use of her name for obvious reasons.

Jill Laura of Hartford, Conn., found her parents gratefully receptive to the new fashion trend. "Mom thinks it's a lot better than the sloppy Joe sweaters and blue jeans we used to wear," said Jill.

Fathers, as usual, were only amused by the whole thing. As Enid Guilfoe of Lafayette, La., commented: "Dad thinks they're cute. He's mad because Mom threw out all her chemise dresses 30 years ago."

Ellida Nevins of Minneapolis said that the first time she brought a chemise dress home from the store, the family spent the rest of the evening reminiscing about the good old days. "My mother," she reported, "brought out the old picture album and showed some of the things she wore at my age. Almost every outfit could make the fashion magazines today."

The chemise style fared poorly in a comparison vote with the tight-fitting sheath dress and the ever popular flared skirt. Only 31 percent of the girls and 8 percent of the boys gave the sack style the nod over these perennial fashion favorites. As a Chicago girl explained, "the sheath makes the most of what you have and the flared skirt can hide what you don't have. Both are very feminine."

Boys Resigned

Marvin Blair, a New York teen-ager, saw it just the opposite. "You really can't tell what's hiding behind those new loose fitting dresses so it might be more attractive in some cases."

The argument over the chemise was not solely between the haves and the have-nots, however.

"They are really the most grotesque dresses I ever tried on," said Irene Fatillo of Cleveland. "You have to do as much as you can with what you have — and I certainly don't have much to do anything with — but why make it even worse?"

Added Mortimer Stanley of Chicago: "Let's face it, the chemise is for the birds."

But even the boys seem resigned to it, like it or not. "I would agree with Elsworth Vories of Boston: 'Paris always has and always will dictate what women wear. Nothing I say will change it.'"

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 8 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 8, add 4. The result is your key number. Religion To Be Present At World's Fair

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

FOR THE first time, a world's fair is giving major attention to God as well as man.

At the international and universal exposition of 1958 which opens Thursday in Brussels, Christianity occupies a notable place on the stage.

Two main bodies of believers — Roman Catholics and Protestants — have chipped in around the globe to erect separate showcases of their faith.

By far the largest, and most elaborate, in the Catholic exhibit. Its sleek, graceful "Civitas Dei" — City of God — spreads over 17,000 square yards of ground, and rises to a cross-crowned peak of 190 feet. Altogether it cost about 1 1/2 million dollars.

Purpose

The purpose, says Pope Pius XII, is to provide a worthy and impressive display of universal catholicism.

In dimensions and investment, the Protestant exhibit is on a smaller scale.

Its trim, pastel-tinted pavilion sits on 1,000 square yards of ground. Above it rises a 65-foot pylon topped by three crosses. Efforts are still being made to finish raising a $235,000 budget.

"The Protestant exhibit is not large," a spokesman said, "but it is beautiful."

For both groups, their participation is a new thing in the century-old history of world fairs.

Both Christian groups have choice locations on the 500-acre fair grounds.

About 40 million persons are expected to visit the fair between now and its close next Oct. 19.

The exhibitors, says the fair commissioner general, Baron Moens de Fernig of Belgium, are supposed to present "their conception of happiness and the means to achieve it."

The church groups, as their answer, seek to depict faith and service.

Theme of the Protestant edifice: The new humanity in the light of Jesus Christ. The Catholic theme: Man and God.

For the Catholic Church, the project has been a centrally coordinated, smooth-working plan, with contributions from national Catholic committees in 52 countries.

The Vatican-designated commissioner general of the exhibit, Paul Heyman, a prominent Belgian layman, toured the world, organizing support with church leaders in various regions.

Divisions

For the Protestants, with their denominational divisions and without unified backing, the job has been tougher going, with Belgium's small Protestant minority taking the lead.

On a here-and-there basis, individual Protestant organizations in different countries have donated. A U.S. committee, set up by friends of the World Council of Churches, still is trying to raise its share.

Both Christian structures are streamlined, bold and modern in design, with sweeping curves, smooth surfaces and vast areas of glass. Continuing programs, worship and outstanding speakers have been set for both.

The extensive Catholic pavilion is built in the form of a walled city, dominated in the center by a strikingly formed church, its contours inspired by an ancient Israeli tent.

From its befrif, holding a huge illuminated cross, an ingeniously arranged series of cables support the slanting roof of the church, with its wide stained glass windows. The framework is of delicately shaded wood.

Besides the 2,500-capacity church, there is a three-story exhibition building, with escalators and high, echoing corridors, a courtyard with six chapels, a 40-bell carillon, a 2,000-capacity restaurant and a concert hall seating 1,200.

In the exhibits, a spokesman said, "The church will try to explain where man stands today in the midst of turmoil and frightening events."

About 50 Catholic organizations have scheduled international congresses at the pavilion before the fair closes.

The Protestant exhibit, stressing Christian unity and the work being done through church cooperation on national and world scenes, includes a 75-foot-long exhibit hall, its floor elevated on pillars.

Color of the building is a pale sky blue. At one end is a round-shaped chapel, with a canted circular roof, and stained glass windows. At one side, rises the cross-topped pylon.

Daily Record Survey

Teaching Profession Loses Many Strong Minds

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles on Monroe County education. Each will be based on the results of the county-wide survey conducted by the author for The Daily Record.

By Leonard Randolph

WHEN we approach the problem of bringing young people into the teaching profession we run bluntly into the complexity of modern values in society.

In response to the question: "Why don't more young people want to become teachers?" many teachers would ask some hard questions of their own.

Those questions would be designed to show that the things we value in present-day society are largely material in nature.

Young men and women who have heard their parents and other older persons harp constantly on the subject of "salary" or "position" seem unlikely to look with favor on a profession which pays only moderate salaries at best and which, at present, has nothing of the prestige, respect and public love that it once had.

Today's society has confronted young people with a fantastic and falsified mythology of success. It is a "success" bred from the component parts of "security" (getting a good job, settling down, staying in one place), living in a (slightly) better home than your neighbor, driving a new car (the more ostentatious, the better) and becoming just as innocuous as possible in the crowd.

With this idea of success planted firmly in his mind, no one can blame a talented young man for deciding to become an engineer or a doctor (they drive Cadillacs) or a "successful" businessman.

Today there is less talk of "dedicating" a life to a profession — and profession — among the young. The conversation and deliberation are more likely to concern the (1) starting salary, (2) rate of salary increase, (3) what other people think of the job or (4) what the retirement possibilities may turn out to be. In the face of public concentration on salary as a yardstick of the man's value to society, fewer young people are choosing fields in which devotion to duty and dedication to principle are the major sources of satisfaction and fulfillment.

If something of value has gone out of the teaching profession in the minds of the young, however, the schools themselves will have to shoulder part of the blame.

In recent years students hearing classroom teachers, have grown accustomed to public speakers (many of whom were simply playing "politics" in carrying the favor of educators) and others talk little but "low salary" in their discussion of education as a whole.

While no one denies that salaries in education have been and are now low in relation to many other professions, it is becoming increasingly obvious that the tidal wave of criticism of the pay teachers get has drowned the ambitions of many a prospective teacher.

As a result nearly all of the more brilliant young persons in graduating classes each year leave high school intent upon becoming "anything but a teacher."

The real leaders in many graduating classes are lost to the education field forever. Their aims are on "bigger things". Their sights are set on the "position with prestige" and the "job with dignity."

Somewhere along the line we have lost sight of the fact that there is no "bigger" thing than the development of the human mind. Prestige, after all, is something which is born and nurtured in the heart and mind of each human being for another and dignity is something no one can buy on the market or sell on the corner.

Reduced to a final analysis none of these things — success, prestige, respect, dignity — has very much to do with a man's annual salary.

To attract more young people into its field, education needs higher salaries.

But teaching the child respect for the teacher is an important part of the battle, too.

No salary label has done that yet.

A surprisingly large number of Monroe County teachers doubt that it ever will. (Tomorrow — Direct Quotes from Teachers)

Two Plans Presented For Office Space

permit removal of all assessment system facilities from the Court House.

Relocation
This, in turn, would provide room for relocation of other County Offices. In line with this proposal:

Civil Defense offices would be moved downstairs into the basement quarters now occupied by Addressograph machines and files. This would place the CD headquarters room adjacent to rooms now being used for Civil Defense.

Space now being used by J. L. Jacobs Co., the engineering firm in charge of property appraisals for the county, would be turned over to two separate branches of the government:

The downstairs portion adjoining the register and recorder's office would be turned over to the register and recorder.

An upstairs office (second floor) now being used as Jacobs Co. office headquarters, would be turned over to the Veterans Affairs agency.

Office space vacated by Civil Defense on the first floor would be used by the prothonotary and clerk of courts.

Under plans outlined yesterday morning, space would still have to be found for the office of the Soil Conservation District.

Agreement
Commissioners and architects agreed that such an office might be created through removing old files from a basement room at the Court House.

Some of these files, Commissioners pointed out are three or four decades old and are no longer of any value. A court order would be required if the County wished to do anything but relocate them, however.

Many of the files contain nothing but copies of old dog or hunting licenses issued during the past.

Commissioners during recent months have leaned more and more toward use of the Court House fourth floor (attic) as storage room for records.

The location would be drier and records could be preserved more easily there, the Commission has noted in the past.

The attic, at present, is not in use at all.

Quill Hurls Charge At Railroad

NEW YORK (AP) — Transport Workers Union President Michael Quill charged yesterday that in some areas Pennsylvania Railroad Negro employees get pass privileges only on condition that the passes are labelled "Colored".

Quill said in a letter to James M. Symes, president of the railroad, that he was "shocked to discover that in sections of the vast Pennsylvania Railroad system a substantial group of your loyal and devoted employees are being subjected to a vicious and un-American practice."

Photostatic Copy
He enclosed a photostatic copy of what he described as a pass bearing the legend "Colored." A union spokesman later said the pass was issued in St. Louis.

In the Pennsylvania's office here, the two persons who handle all passes said they had never seen such a designation on a pass.

Film To Be Shown On Billy Graham

THE MOVING picture "Miracle in Manhattan," showing the highlights of the Billy Graham campaign in New York City last Summer, will be shown at the Mountainhome Methodist Church tomorrow at 8 p.m. It was announced by the pastor, Rev. Harold N. MacMurray.

The film has been shown widely throughout the country, and is acclaimed as an outstanding religious film.

In keeping with the Graham campaign, it stresses only the features that deal with the arousing of interest in Christian religion in the minds and hearts of those who heard Mr. Graham, during the three months and more that he worked in New York City.

Evangelists
Billy Graham has been hailed as a qualified successor to the great evangelists of the past, Moody, Torrey and Billy Sunday, and by the use of radio and television he has been heard by more people more times than any preacher in history.

Rev. Harold MacMurray invites the general public to this event. A silver offering will be taken to defray the expenses of securing the film.

"TWO IS COMPANY, THREE IS A CROWD"

(Author's Name Below)

For thousands of years the two ancient professions of medicine and pharmacy have unitedly served the health of everyone. In order that they may do this properly all physicians and pharmacists spend years studying at a college and must pass a state examination to prove their knowledge.

Recently, untrained persons, grasping an opportunity to make some quick money are selling vitamins and other medicines from door-to-door. They even presume to tell people how to take them. Your health is not to be trifled with. Be wise. You are safe when you depend on your physician and pharmacist.
